Dear George:

It was nice to have your letter of 11 August and to know that there is a possibility of your still being interested in something that we discussed previously.

Houston is away at the present time on leave, but I have sent him a copy of your letter and asked him to let me know what he thinks when he gets back.

I note that your circumstances are such that you probably will not be available until after the first half year of law school. Of course, I do not know how things will be at that time with regard to possible openings in the Office of the General Counsel. It is my understanding that a search is still being made for the right party, but of course, I do not know when said party is likely to show up. However, we will explore the situation and let you know if it is worth your while to come down here for a talk.

This has been a tough summer here and I hope you are faring better in the country.

With best regards,

Sincerely yours,
